

Caci and Trevor Chapman have been married for over 15 years, and have always dreamed of leaving everything behind and sailing around the world. With five children aged 13 and under, professional careers, and the responsibilities of everyday life to manage, their dream wasn't always a very accessible option- until now. Several years ago, the Chapmans' eldest son, Jace, started to show a big interest in acting. In order to support his dreams, the family uprooted from their Utah home and headed for L.A, where Jace could focus on establishing his acting career. Just last year, he was cast as the lead role in the Netflix Original series, The Healing Powers Of Dude, which made its debut in early 2020.

We want our children to see this beautiful world while it's still here to see, and then work to do what they can to help save it as both children and adults.

Though Jace is very driven to keep acting, the current realities of a pandemic-stricken world have affected the industry tremendously. With Hollywood essentially on lockdown since mid-April, the Chapman's decided it was a good time to fulfil their sailing dreams. With little hesitation, they purchased a 46' blue water cruiser and set out on the adventure of a lifetime. With five kids in tow, the Chapman's are documenting their extraordinary adventures on Instagram, and via their YouTube channel. Follow their epic adventure, where you can experience the highs and lows of sailing with kids (during a pandemic, no less!).

BabyGaga recently spoke to Caci Chapman, matriarch of this incredible family, who gave us an amazing sneak peek into their new adventure!
